FIU'S BUSINESS SCHOOL BUILDS NEW COMPLEX

Florida International University said its College of Business Administration has broken ground on its new $45 million complex.

The building is being designed by Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates, an architectural firm responsible for such buildings as the World Trade Center in Amsterdam, the Netherlands; Miami's Espirito Santo Plaza and the refurbishment of the London School of Economics.

Kohn Pedersen Fox is collaborating with the Coral Gables-based architectural firm BEA International to build Phase 1, the 54,000 square-foot academic halls, commons and student halls, expected to be completed in mid-2007.
