Knight Ridder/Tribune - 06/17/2007 3:37 AM ET

Is Philadelphia about to become a wireless heaven, filled with laptop-wielding residents connecting to the Internet on the cheap from home or around town? Or is the dream announced almost three years ago by Mayor Street to make Philadelphia a "hot city" just that -- a dream whose reality will only disappoint? We're about to find out.

Knight Ridder/Tribune - 06/17/2007 3:34 AM ET

After she slipped and fell on an icy sidewalk in North Philadelphia, Denise Jackson pocketed a modest sum: $1,500. Her lawyer did much better. Following a dizzying whirl of legal filings and real estate transactions, lawyer Willis W. Berry Jr. ended up owning the vacant lot where Jackson fell -- a property now worth more than $100,000. Jackson now says she was cheated.

The final day of the Tour de France is traditionally a casual ride down the Champs Elysees, celebratory champagne in hand. Officials from Lockheed Martin Aeronautics in Fort Worth might be tempted to re-enact the famous finish this week at the Paris Air Show. Aviation industry experts say the manufacturer is flying high.

Supermarkets Offering Personal Scanners

AP Digital - 06/17/2007 12:03 AM ET

Stephanie Cerneck doesn't go through the checkout line at her supermarket anymore. "When I come up to the checkout, everything's already bagged, I go to my car, I'm done. The handheld scanner lets customers keep a running tally as they work their way through the aisles, allowing them to spend more time shopping and less time waiting to check out.

Modest inflation thrills investors [The Kansas City Star, Mo.]

Knight Ridder/Tribune - 06/16/2007 11:59 PM ET

Stocks ended a positive week Friday with a push back toward recent record highs. Punctuating the day, the Dow Jones industrial average flirted with another triple-digit gain as investors saw what they wanted in a key measure of inflation at the consumer level. Olathe-based Garmin Ltd., meanwhile, reached its fourth record high in as many sessions, pushing toward $70 a share.
