AWARDED: Mary Ann Von Glinow, professor of management and international business and director of the Center for International Business Education and Research at FIU's College of Business Administration, will be the recipient of The Academy of Management's "Distinguished Service Award." The award recognizes excellence in developing and enhancing a field of study, founding or creatively editing a journal, and building institutions – for example, through unique or unusually effective service to a major professional organization. Von Glinow has served the Academy as president, as a member of the Board of Governors, and in numerous chair positions. She has authored more than 100 journal articles and 11 books. She also heads an international consortium of researchers who delve into best international human resource practices. The award will be presented in August at the Academy's annual meeting in Honolulu, Hawaii.
