Afghan group names for post

A professor in Florida International University’s College of Business Administration has been named a founder by the Afghan Institute of Accounting based on in-depth knowledge of Islamic accounting and auditing practices.

With the appointment, FIU’s Dr. Felix Pomeranz was also cited for his commitment to promoting better relationships with Islamic regions.

The institute, which will be located in Kabul, will serve as an exclusive accounting-training organization for Afghan accountants and for employees in government and non-government organizations. Its goal, publicists said, is to help establish a state-of-the-art system of government accounting practices in Afghanistan.

The role of Dr. Pomeranz in the institute, according to a media advisory, is to involve shaping policies and procedures, including standard accounting practices, and promoting professionalism within the accounting field.
