So far, John S. Zdanowicz said his biggest career achievement is a $2 million research grant from the U.S. Treasury to study transfer pricing. But establishing a real estate center for one of South Florida's multibillion-dollar businesses would also put Zdanowicz at the forefront of a powerhouse local industry.

Though also active in the Beacon Council's economic roundtable, Zdanowicz still knows how to get away from commerce concerns: by trout fishing in the Adirondack Mountains in New York.

Zdanowicz said, because of his belief in freedom of choice and individual liberty, his role model is Milton Friedman, the 1976 Nobel Memorial Prize winner.
